

Midwest battles rising floodwaters; deluge of rain persists

By The Associated Press

Chicago suburbanites stacked sandbags around their homes Friday, and floodwaters in Kansas and Kansas City were rising. The rain prolonged the weeks-long deluge of the Midwest, keeping more than 15,000 people from their homes.

Torrential overnight rains sent streams over their banks on Oklahoma and eastern Kansas to northern Illinois and Michigan, closing roads and highways and forcing further evacuations, authorities said.

Residents of Bartlesville secured their property as floodwaters closed in around the northeastern Oklahoma town of 35,000 after the latest deluge forced engineers to open to 16 feet and rising. The Caney River was at 16 feet and rising. The Caney River was at 16 feet and rising. The Caney River was at 16 feet and rising.

In addition to heavy rains, Missouri was hit by at least two tornadoes Friday, as high water from a creek forced two state agencies to close in Jefferson City and the Mississippi River flooded some businesses in Hannibal.

Cedar City, a community of about 450 people across the Missouri River from Jefferson City, was evacuated Friday because water was overflowing the river levees and Turkey Creek.

Western Pennsylvania was under a flash-flood warning after streams began overflowing, flooding residential streets in Curwensville, and a flash-flood watch was issued Friday for most of Indiana.

In northeastern Illinois, where floods already have forced 3,200 families — about 13,000 people — to evacuate, 1 to 3 inches of rain fell overnight, said National Weather Service flood specialist Tom Dietrich.

The deluge is blamed on an unusual weather pattern that stalled a pair of saturated, tropical storms over the nation's midsection. Since Sept. 20, at least 10 deaths in five states have been blamed on the weather.

In western Illinois, the National Weather Service said the Mississippi River topped its previous fall flood record and would likely continue to rise.

nappers and us, other than an indirect statement that if we could persuade a third country to release some people who were tried and convicted of murder, that would be the way to get our people back.

Well, there's no way that third country's going to do that.

The State Department, earlier Friday, appealed to the kidnappers of the American hostages in Lebanon to make contact with the United States or with intermediaries for discussions on the release of the captives.

"We've always been willing to establish contact either through direct talks with the kidnappers or their representatives or with third parties," deputy spokesman Charles Redman said.

"Although the kidnappers have demonstrated that they can communicate with news agencies by letter, telephone and videotape, they've shown no inclination to talk directly to us."

Islamic Jihad, which holds three Americans hostage, released the 10-minute tape and a statement. But there was no way of knowing whether the two had made the statements willingly.

It was the first time Anderson, 38, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, appeared in a videotape since his abduction in a Moslem West Beirut 1½ years ago. Jacobson, 55, said the hardships the captives face have worsened in recent weeks, though he gave no details.

The two men read separately from prepared statements and bitterly attacked the administration's vigor and speed in securing Daniloff's Monday release from Moscow.

"How can any official justify the interest, attention and action given in that case and the inattention given ours?" said Anderson, who wore a collared shirt and tie.

"After 2½ years of empty talk and refusal to act on the part of the Reagan administration, it has to see the propaganda and bombast with which that administration saved the problem of Mr. Daniloff, a citizen like us who was imprisoned only a short time," Anderson said.

Jacobson, in a statement addressed to Reagan, asked: "Don't we also deserve the recognition, the respect and the honorable treatment by the United States government? Don't we deserve the same attention and protection that you gave Daniloff?"

Redman said the difference between the Lebanon cases and the Daniloff case was that the U.S. News & World Report correspondent was being held by the Soviet government, "an identifiable party."

He said the United States could hold the Soviets accountable for Daniloff's arrest—and was able to hold discussions for his release.

Coverage

through the Association of Idaho Cities, but it failed because of a lack of participation.

Jerome County Commissioner Pam Smith says her county had a good record of having few insurance claims, but rates still increased. "We shouldn't have had this trouble," she says.

At one point, Jerome County went without liability insurance because it couldn't find a private company to provide coverage. A few months ago, the county joined the counties in the Risk Management program.

Jerome Mayor Ralph Peters says the generalities that can't afford their own insurance pool are hurting because their residents must pay for insurance rather than street repairs.

"We could be nasty about it and say, 'We've got to have this money for insurance,' but people have to live here and pay the bills," Peters says.

The cost of insurance for the city went from $33,000 last year to $77,000 this year.

Peters, a member of the board of the cities association's failed insurance pool, says he's still worried about private companies again pulling out insurance from under the cities, because Congress has taken an interest in the issue.

Peters blames everyone, from insurance companies to jurors, for cities having to pay higher premiums and settlements and defendings more lawsuits. The situation, he adds, is not improving.

"The availability of insurance is not much better than a year ago. There are fewer companies in that business," he says.

The hope for governments is in Congress and the state legislatures, Peters says. The cities association also is considering another attempt at establishing a pool. Until then, the Jerome City Council will be seeing more claims against the city, he says.

"It's pretty disappointing for a public official. It becomes more a headache and detracts from other business that should be taken care of," he says.

Rupert Mayor Bill Whitton says his city recently has joined a new coalition of businesses, government entities and medical associations supporting reform in 1987 Idaho legislative session.

Proponents of reform, such as caps on pain-and-suffering damages and the contingency fee, say the proposals will ease the burden on the courts and lower insurance rates.

Rupert operated temporarily without coverage last year when private insurance companies cancelled policies, saying they couldn't continue to afford to defend lawsuits and pay large awards.

Rupert now has insurance, but the price was high. Last year the city paid about $27,000 for insurance. This year it will levy for $15,000, but the city expects to spend even more on insurance, Whitton says.

Paying more insurance costs is robbing other city services, he says.

"We've had to reduce personnel in the Police Department because we couldn't afford to replace them because we've been hit with liability premiums. We've had to make belt-tightenings," he says.

Whitton is concerned that the city will lose its insurance again.

"If we can't get liability insurance, that really puts us in a risky situation," he says.

Rupert is concerned with preventing lawsuits by eliminating potential risks, he says.

When a child was injured recently on a slide in a city park, he ordered the slide be dismantled — even before a claim was filed over the injury — because it was a risk.

"What do we do, take all the playground equipment out of the parks or do we keep it and have an exposure?" Whitton asks.

City crews now completely barricade streets when conducting maintenance work. "We do that not only for the safety for our people, but to reduce our risk of exposure," he says.

Jobs

lower-paying service jobs masked the net loss of 43,000 manufacturing, retail and other goods-producing jobs last month.

Of the 150,000 new service jobs, more than one-third were in the computer and business service areas. Retail trade employment rose by 43,000 in September and banks, insurance companies and real estate firms added 20,000 new jobs.

A separate, quarterly calculation of the number of Americans who have given up looking for work because they think they cannot find a job rose by 68,000 to 1,169,000 over the last three months. Because those people are not actively looking for jobs, they are not counted as being officially unemployed.

The Labor Department said the increase in unemployment occurred primarily among young men, with most men between 16 and 24. Among other groups, the department says, these unemployment rates for September:

Adult men, 6.2 percent, up from 5.9 percent in August.
Adult women, 6.2, up from 6.1.
Blacks, 14.8, up from 14.6.
Whites, 6.0, up from 5.8.
Hispanics, 11.1, up from 11.0.
Teen-agers, 18.7, up from 17.7.
Black teen-agers, 37.8, down from 41.8.

An alternate unemployment calculation that combines the 17 million members of the armed forces stationed in the United States with the 118.2-million-member civilian labor force rose 0.2 percent to 6.3 percent.

part of the probe, said Tim Trombly of the "Secret Service" office in Spokane.

McCallister refused to specify the items taken from the Dorr home and said agents were still cataloging evidence Friday.

Dorr's wife, Debbie, said Thursday that "anything having to do with explosives" was seized, but McCallister would not comment when asked about explosives.

There were no injuries in Monday's bombings or in a pipe-bombing at a priest's home two weeks earlier. One bomb exploded Monday in front of the Coeur d'Alene Federal Building, another went off at a luggage store and a third detonated near a restaurant.

A fourth bomb was found and defused, and authorities refused comment Friday on evidence found in analysis of the device.

Asked about ties between the bombings and the anti-Aryan Nations, Walker said, "I don't want to say the bombings are any part of any organization."

"I would like to say more," Walker said. "I anticipate that charges will be filed — there are great likelihoods that they will be. But I have an ethical responsibility to be careful what I say in any pre-trial situation."

Seventy-five officers from local, state and federal agencies are part of the task force formed after Monday's bombings, said John Rooney, head of Idaho's Department of Law Enforcement.

Several dozen officers participated in the search of the Dorr home late Thursday. More than two dozen vehicles arrived in the area and set up roadblocks about 4:30 p.m.

Mrs. Dorr, at first told officers that her husband and Hawley were not there, Walker said Friday. The two men were apprehended soon after heading out the back of the property, he said.

Walker said he did not believe Mrs. Dorr would be charged for making false statements to officers.

Correction

An editor's error resulted in an inaccurate listing of Sports Highlights on Pages 14 and 22 in the Oct. 3 edition of the Times-News TV Book. The listings indicated that games in the Major League Baseball playoffs series would be broadcast today and Sunday. Actually, those games are scheduled to begin next week.

The first game of the AL series between the California Angels and the Boston Red Sox will be aired Tuesday, Oct. 7, at 6 p.m. MDT on ABC affiliates. The first game of the NL series between the New York Mets and the Houston Astros will be aired Wednesday, Oct. 8, at 6 p.m., also on ABC. The games highlighted in this weekend's listings will be aired next weekend, Oct. 11 and 12.

The Times-News regrets the error.

Symms criticized for sanctions vote

By The Associated Press

With Idaho's image across the nation as a haven for racial extremists growing, both Republican Sen. Steve Symms and Democratic Rep. Richard Stallings have come under fire for their contrasting votes on President Reagan's veto of an economic sanctions bill against the white-minority government of South Africa.

Democratic Gov. John Evans, who is challenging Symms in the Nov. 4 election, said Friday that the first-term incumbent's vote to uphold Reagan's veto of sanctions aimed at ending apartheid in South Africa shows Idaho's need to send the nation a clear message that the state supports human rights.

But Mel Richardson, the Republican trying to unseat Stallings, said the freshman lawmaker's support of sanctions despite threats of South African retaliation against U.S. grain imports came at the expense of Idaho farmers.

And at the same time Symms' work in the Senate was coming under fire, another dispute over his activities back home was winding down.

The former manager of the southwestern Idaho winery owned by the Symms family ended nearly two weeks of inferences to the contrary by conceding he could not prove the senator knew any alleged mislabeling of wine at the Ste. Chapelle

Winery violated federal law.

In a statement issued Thursday, Bill Broich reiterated earlier contentions that Symms, locked in a tight re-election battle, knew of the mislabeling. But he said there was no evidence to indicate he knew it was illegal.

"It has now been pointed out to me that whatever knowledge Steve Symms had is not relevant to the controversy," Broich said in a seven-page statement.

But later in the day, Symms campaign manager Phil Reberger told a Boise news conference that Broich was supporting Evans in the election. Reberger said many claims that he would, Broich still has produced nothing to link Symms with the wine mislabeling, Reberger said.

Reberger said the senator still is considering legal action against Broich, but that decision will be made after Symms returns to Idaho.

Symms was in Washington on Friday, but his campaign schedule has him returning to Idaho this weekend to launch a motorcade that will last most of this month, starting Monday morning in Caldwell.

In other developments Friday, the National Rifle Association endorsed Republican Lt. Gov. David Leroy's candidacy for governor, giving him a grade of "A" for his "strong support of firearm and hunting rights."

Leroy's opponent, former Democratic governor Cecil Andrus, received a C from the NRA in the latest round of the candidates' fight for the vote of Idaho sportsmen.

The group's endorsement comes amid charges from Sport PAC, a political action committee backing Andrus, that Leroy never has held a hunting license and bought his first fishing license only last year. Leroy denies the allegations.

While the candidates were being evaluated, Idaho's current governor was issuing a falling grade on South African sanctions to the man he's seeking to remove from the Senate, particularly in light of recent violence that has rocked the Panhandle.

"With the image problems that Idaho is having nationally, we need to do everything we can to show that Idahoans support human rights and civil rights," Evans said Friday in condemning Symms' vote, along with Sen. James McClure and Rep. Larry Craig, to sustain Reagan's veto of sanctions.

Shortly after three bombs exploded in Coeur d'Alene on Monday, the governor said he felt they were a backlash to the state's efforts to show support for human rights.

Vocal bus driver canned

BOISE (AP) — A Boise city bus driver, who announced over the company radio last week he had been harassed by management for his complaints about toxic fumes in buses, has been fired.

David Benson, 43, was suspended without pay Sept. 23 for using the radio to make his complaint, which was heard by passengers and other drivers, Engel said.

Benson, a six-year employee, said he was harassed by management because of his complaints of fumes overcoming him in September.

Judge tosses out suit over noise

BOISE (AP) — A dispute that started as a disagreement between Jefferson County neighbors about noise has ended with a ruling by U.S. District Judge Marion Callister against a $150,000 lawsuit brought by Betty Jeanne Martin, 35, Menan.

Martin sued Jefferson County Sheriff Garth Gunderson, Deputy Reed Sanders and Jefferson County over her 1983 alleged trespassing charges.

But Callister on Thursday agreed with the county that the arrest was justified at the time, and granted the defendants summary judgment.

He also ruled that the defendants can recover their costs of defending the lawsuit, which was listed at $614.

Martin alleged that in the summer of 1984, her neighbor, Charles Summers, Rigby, started using a tractor to run an irrigation pump.

The tractor was just 150 feet from a bedroom window, and the racket late at night made it impossible for her to sleep, she said in a lawsuit.

She said she went over to the Summers farm and shut the tractor off one night. Summers started it the next morning. She went over at night and shut it off again, she said.

Testimony in the case indicated that went on three days and nights, and finally Summers asked the sheriff's office to arrest her for trespassing.

Callister said Summers arrested her when she refused to sign a citation, handcuffed her, used excessive force, and finally held her at the sheriff's office for a couple of hours before releasing her.

She said she never was formally charged with trespassing, and sued for civil rights violations. She asked $125,000 punitive damages and $25,000 general damages.

The county contended that under the circumstances, the deputy's conduct was justified, and denied he used improper force.

No position at Blackfoot

BLACKFOOT (AP) — The Blackfoot Chamber of Commerce has backed away from last month's formal endorsement of the controversial right-to-work referendum on Idaho's Nov. 4 ballot, voting instead to take no position on the law banning compulsory union membership.

Chamber President Lynda Ferrin would not release the exact results of the second vote of chamber members on Friday, saying only that the group had decided to remain neutral on the issue.

The chamber voted "overwhelmingly" in favor of right-to-work in early September, Mrs. Ferrin said. But since then several members have gotten involved with politics, some have said the position has cost them business from union members.

Guild president Patty Duke speaks against right-to-work legislation

BOISE (AP) — Actress Patty Duke, president of the Screen Actors Guild, says it is unacceptably opposed to right-to-work laws, because they do nothing except weaken unions and lower wages for anyone.

But she refused at a news conference Friday afternoon to criticize fellow SAG member Charlton Heston, who has made Idaho advertisements urging support for right-to-work.

"I'm disappointed that he feels the way he does," she said. "I can speak his mind, but that doesn't make me like what he says."

She said she would not support any effort to make Heston resign from the actors' union because of his support for right-to-work.

Idaho became the 21st state last year with a right-to-work law. It bans compulsory union membership or payment of union dues as a condition of employment. Organized labor has forced a referendum on the law in the Nov. 4 general election.

"You don't win anything by telling people to go away," she said, about the effort by some SAG members to force Heston out because of his right-to-work views.

But she said she didn't come to Idaho to work against right-to-work because Heston favors it. "I would have been here anyway," she said.

Mrs. Duke said SAG has about a dozen members in Idaho. "It's vitally important that we enlighten as many members as we can" about the dangers of right-to-work laws, she said.

"The bottom line is simply that right-to-work is designed to weaken unions," she said, "to make them ineffective in bargaining."

She said any labor organization should be battling right-to-work, because if it succeeds in Idaho, that might encourage sponsors to try in other states.

Other actors have come to Idaho recently to say that film production companies won't come to the state unless it is a right-to-work state, she called that "verbal slight of hand."

"Stop for a moment and think where most filming is done: It's done in California — a non right-to-work state," she said.

She also said she was happy to come to Idaho because her husband, Mike Pearce, is from the state. Pearce lived at Wallace.

Man mulls plea

BOISE (AP) — A 31-year-old Boise man has been killed in a one-vehicle accident in southwest Boise.

Timothy Ernest Haak died late Thursday when the pickup truck he was driving slammed into a guardrail along the westbound lanes of Interstate 84, veered across the median into the eastbound lanes and rolled, police said. He was thrown from the cab.

TRANSFORMERS AND CAPACITORS before being outlawed several years ago.

Waste generated by the transformers had PCBs in them, but we didn't identify some that had PCBs," Rainey said.

He said the agency would accept a payment of $250 and waive the remainder of the $4,500 settlement if the city tests all its transformers and removes any PCBs.

"We proposed to test everything in the next two years and everything over 50 parts per million (of PCB) would be disposed," Rainey said.

So far, he said nine capacitors and a couple of transformers have been shipped by Soda Springs to an EPA-certified disposal site for incineration at a cost of about $15,000.

EPA cuts fines against city for alleged PCB violations

SODA SPRINGS (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency has agreed to reduce fines against the city of Soda Springs for alleged violations involving the handling of hazardous PCBs.

City Administrator Roy Rainey said negotiations with the EPA have led the federal agency to cut a fine from $15,000 to $1,500 for three electrical transformers owned by Soda Springs that allegedly were "sweating," the suspected cancer-causing chemical in 1984.

The EPA also has levied $3,000 in fines for improper labeling and storage of transformers containing polychlorinated biphenyls, used for many years as a coolant in oil in

Man dies in crash

BOISE (AP) — A 17-year-old Boise youth who pleaded guilty to first-degree murder the day he was to be tried for the death of a Boise County man is having second thoughts.

A sentencing hearing set for Friday for Justin Milo Beeson on charges of first-degree murder and grand theft was postponed Thursday so Beeson could decide whether to file a motion to withdraw his plea.

Defense Attorney Rolf Kehne told 4th District Judge Alan Schwartzmann that Beeson is having doubts about his plea.

Jerome Police Chief Cameron, citing stress of job, resigns

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — The resignation of Jerome Police Chief Darryl Cameron, effective Dec. 31, was announced jointly Friday afternoon by Mayor Ralph Peters and Chief Cameron.

The reason for the resignation, the statements said, was stress and a change in lifestyle for Cameron. He said he does not have other employment and has not decided if he will stay in law enforcement and in the city of Jerome.

"I have turned in my resignation to the city of Jerome," he said in a statement. "As police chief for the past five years, I have met and developed a lot of friends in the Jerome Area. I appreciate the support they have given us. I would like to thank the city for this opportunity they have given me.

"This job has been very stressful and I am looking forward to a change in lifestyle," Cameron said.

In another prepared statement covering the resignation, Peters said he is accepting the resignation and wishing Cameron the best of luck.

"Darryl has been working under stressful conditions, and it has come to a point where he wants to make some changes in his life," Peters said.

"We all feel that he is a gentleman and a man of high morals. He is a friend and will be missed by all, in-

'This job has been very stressful and I am looking forward to a change in lifestyle.'

cluding the City Council and Jerome Police Department."

Peters said the city has not called for applications or looked that far ahead yet. He confirmed that the resignation was something of a mutual agreement between all concerned and said it will be up to the Jerome City Council to name a successor.

"We aren't in any hurry," Peters said. "We want someone with a clean slate — someone from outside of the department."

Peters said the resignation was not a sudden decision.

Cameron has been in law enforcement work the past 18 years. He worked for the Twin Falls Police Department for 10 years and as a deputy for the Jerome County Sheriff's Department, where he held the rank of sergeant until he resigned to become Jerome police chief in October 1981. He has been active in the Magic Valley and Idaho Peace Officers associations. Cameron served one term as president of the Magic Valley group and was scheduled to move into that position again next year.

Cameron said the reason Dec. 31 was set as the effective date of his resignation is to give him plenty of time to find something else to do, whether in law enforcement or some different type of work.

His wife Aletha works in Twin Falls, a fact he said may govern any future moves the family makes.

Rumors of Cameron's departure as chief spread through the community for the past several weeks. A group of citizens had indicated plans to attend the City Council meeting Tuesday to urge that Cameron not resign or be asked to resign.

Peters said Cameron has told him the average tenure of a police chief in a small community such as Jerome is about 2½ years.

Cameron's appointment as police chief followed a year-long controversy over the chief's position then held by James McGowan. McGowan, a former San Francisco police officer, was criticized by officers in his department and by some members of the City Council.

Everhart, who was mayor at the time, sought a resignation from McGowan and attempted to fire him. The action stirred up a debate among the council that ended when McGowan resigned and left Jerome.

Olson: Tired of farm auctions

Ex-Elmore sheriff disliked that task

By MARILYN HAUKE ESSEX
The Associated Press

MOUNTAIN HOME — On the irrigated high desert of Southern Idaho, the tentacles of the farm crisis pulling thousands of producers to the brink of bankruptcy and strangling their rural economies are now enveloping the county courthouse.

After a third of a century in law enforcement, Elmore County Sheriff Larry Olson has turned in his badge, tired of presiding over farm auctions and watching the lifetime accumulations of his friends sold to the highest bidder.

Sitting back in his small, unassuming office in the courthouse square, the 54-year-old career law officer seemed relieved at the prospect of ending the intensifying conflict between his feelings and the law he took an oath to uphold.

"I've lost a lot of sleep worrying about going out at 2 o'clock the next afternoon and selling a guy's property," he said. "My sentiments are with them. . . . But when the court system comes in here and says, 'Here's the paperwork,' you have to do it."

The term he started less than two years ago with the pledge to continue "the high caliber of service" the county's 22,000 residents got from his predecessor ended this week with his abrupt retirement.

Rick Layher, 32, is taking over for the last 27 months of Olson's term, moving up from the chief deputy spot that Olson had held for a decade.

High blood pressure was behind his decision to retire, and Olson said a deciding factor was the stress of acting as a collection agent on friends and neighbors.

"I've known some of these guys for years. These are good farmers just trying to make a living," he said. "Even during his 1981 campaign, farm foreclosures were only a minute part of a rural sheriff's job in Idaho, despite agriculture's financial plight."

But since then the roof has caved in on hundreds of producers throughout the state. Wheat prices plummeted over 40 percent. Potato prices fell by half. Eight percent of the state's 24,000 farmers are technically bankrupt, and another 9 percent are on the brink.

Only days ago, east-central Idaho farmer Kenneth Tuckett committed suicide 10 months after Jefferson County sheriffs deputies took his cattle herd as part of a bankruptcy proceeding.

During 1983 alone the state lost 600 farms, and 500,000 acres of land went out of production. New foreclosure actions are being filed almost daily in federal court in Boise, and more and more farms are being sold from the steps of the state's county courthouses.

Olson has presided over 11 such sales in the past 18 months.

"I look for a lot more foreclosures. A lot more farmers to have financial trouble," he said, remembering the hostility directed at him when he had to deliver the foreclosure papers — the ultimate bearer of bad news.

"I'd hate like hell to have somebody come knocking on my door and tell me they're going to sell my house," Olson said.

Agricultural Extension Agent Mit Seyedbagheri commiserated with Olson, knowing first-hand that farmers are paid people whose heritage and values are tied to their land.

"It doesn't mean they're mad at the sheriff," he said. "But they need someone to take care of them."

The foreclosure problem has been

An early morning fire severely damaged the roof and interior of the Victorian-style Dollarhide house in Ketchum.

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News Correspondent

KETCHUM — The historic Dollarhide house, which had recently found a site to rest and an owner to restore it, was heavily damaged by a fire early on Friday morning.

Ted McConville, who was in the process of buying the building after a four-year battle to save it from destruction, said he believes the fire was not an accident.

The temperature was 30 degrees outside when the fire started, he said, and combustible materials had been removed after the house was moved a year ago to the empty street right-of-way

Benefactors suspect arson; future of gallery now clouded

Workers were painting the uninsured building but were using water-soluble paint, he said.

"How does that (the fire) happen unless somebody employed arsonists in there?" asked McConville, who said he has spent several thousand dollars this year to prepare the house for restoration.

He said, however, that he, the State Fire Marshal's office, doesn't know who may have helped determine the cause of the blaze, that no firefighters out of bed early on Friday morning.

The city's dispatchers received a call on the emergency 911 number at about 2:30 a.m., reporting the fire, Johnson said.

It took until about 5 a.m. to control the blaze that heavily damaged the building's interior and roof. Still, Johnson said, the structure is relatively intact for a fire of this magnitude.

He does not know whether it is salvageable, however, he said.

Commission denies jail negligence

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County commissioners Ann Cover, Marvin Hempleman and Judy Felton were angered at being accused of negligence in a suit filed by the mother of convicted rapist Richard Ray Bradley, who hanged himself in the county jail two years ago.

The commissioners were named as defendants, both personally and in their official capacities, in the $500,000 lawsuit filed last June in U.S. District Court by Bradley's mother, Carma Lee Jansson.

Jansson alleged that unsafe and "unconstitutional" conditions at the jail, located on the fourth floor of the Twin Falls County Courthouse, contributed to her son's "deteriorating state of mind" after his conviction.

Jail officials should have monitored her son more closely, as he had attempted suicide in the jail several years ago, Jansson alleged.

The commissioners say they had done all they could to maintain a safe jail and weren't negligent. "I don't feel we deserve that," Cover says.

Hempleman, running for re-election this November, says the suit gave him "second thoughts about seeking public office."

The Jansson lawsuit has been turned over to the county's insurer to defend.

Another lawsuit over the jail already has cost county taxpayers more than $50,000.

On Feb. 11, the commissioners settled a suit filed by two jail inmates who made allegations of inadequate conditions at the jail. The commissioners agreed to make jail improvements, place a limit on the jail population and build a new jail as soon as possible.

Attorney fees, the improvements, and boarding inmates in other jails to comply with the population limit are some of the costs resulting from the suit. County officials have budgeted $16,500 a month to board some inmates elsewhere during the 1986-87 fiscal year.

The lawyer who filed the action on behalf of the inmates argued that the lawsuit resulted in a safer jail. Greg Fuller of Jerome, who sought his fees but no damages in the action, claimed the improved conditions may prevent costlier claims against the county.

But the commissioners disagree that Fuller did them or the taxpayers a favor. They say they already were working on replacing the 75-year-old jail. The suit has only cost the taxpayers unnecessarily, they argue.

Harvest reduces jobless figures

Three-country area sees .5 percent dip

By The Associated Press
and The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The onset of the harvest cut unemployment in the Magic Valley area by one percentage point during September, as workers returned to fields and to food-processing plants.

The seasonally adjusted jobless rate for Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding counties fell .5 of a percentage point during the month to an even 6 percent.

The rate for the entire state took a similar tumble, after spiking to a 13-month high in August. It dropped .4 of a percentage point to 6.4 percent.

Improvements in the unemployment rate can be attributed mainly to the harvesting of the 1983 crop.

Idaho Employment Director Scott McDonald said nearly 2,600 workers returned to their jobs at processing plants as the potato crop was ready for processing.

The impact of food processing was most evident in Canyon County, where the jobless rate dove 2.8 percentage points in the Magic Valley. J.R. Simplot Co. workers returned to their production lines during the month, as did workers at Idaho Frozen Foods Corp., now renamed Universal Frozen Foods.

"Normally, the unemployment rate in September does drop substantially because of the high number of people unemployed in August. In the food processing industry," said Lon McDonald (no relation), state job force analyst at Twin Falls. In the Twin Falls-Jerome-Gooding counties area, fewer workers were jobless during the month, an improvement of one-third from August figures.

September and October are the top two months for employment in the Magic Valley, he said.

According to the Department of Employment's unadjusted estimates for the three-county area, 3,507 workers had jobs during September and 1,687 were out of work.

Statewide, seasonally adjusted figures showed 404,000 people

Uncovered manhole results in $40,330 city settlement

TWIN FALLS — Ralph Brannan, of Twin Falls, set out to watch his nephew shoot a little pool on the evening of April 6, 1983. But before the evening was over, the city of Twin Falls was behind the eight ball, facing a $555,000 lawsuit.

Brannan and his brother-in-law, Cliff Sparrow, arrived at The Corner Pocket bar on Kimberly Road that evening to see Sparrow's son compete in a pool tournament.

But they were unable to find a space in the parking lot and parked nearby in the 7-Up Bottling Co. lot, according to court documents.

Brannan got out of the passenger's side of the car and took four or five steps toward the back of the car when he stepped into an open city water-meter hole. It was dark and the hole was in the shadow of another car, Brannan's attorney, James May, said.

The two men pushed the lid, lying a foot away, back onto the hole and, with Sparrow's help, Brannan shuffled over to the pool tournament, where they stayed for a while until his injuries employed and 27,700 people off job rolls, the agency reported.

As in the Magic Valley, the numbers of unemployed people fell. Department Director Scott McDonald said that while agriculture was the main force putting people to work, seasonal jobs in state and federal government, wholesale trades and transportation also contributed.
Despite the new job activity, Idaho's total labor force continued to shrink during September on a year-to-year basis. It was 1,200 workers smaller than in September 1985, according to state figures.

Unemployment rates during September in the state's major regions:
• Idaho — 6.4 percent, down 4 percent
• Magic Valley — 6 percent, down 3 percent
• Panhandle (Coeur d'Alene) — unavailable
• Lewiston area — 6.3 percent, no change
• Canyon County — 7.3 percent, down 2.8 percent
• Ada County (Boise) — 4.2 percent, up 2 percent
• Pocatello area — 7.7 percent, up 3 percent
• Idaho Falls area — 4.3 percent, up 3 percent

Day care licensing forum slated

TWIN FALLS — A public forum on day care licensing will be held Oct. 20, from 7-9 p.m., at the KMVT community room.
"Invitations have been mailed to all District 23 and 25 candidates, as well as Denton Darrington and his opponent Grant Hansen," said Ron Black, president of the Magic Valley Day Care Association, in a news release.
Also participating in the forum will be representatives from city and county government, the South Central District Health Department, Department of Health and Welfare, and Occupational Licensing.

Because he is a legislative candidate, Black said that he will step down as president of the association during the forum discussion, turning over leadership to Rose Swann, association vice president, to avoid any appearance of conflict.
Black said that he hoped the forum being used with KTF's Carol Stevens will put the candidates "unmistakenly on record" when it comes to day care licensing.

Man injured in single-car wreck

BUHL — A Castileford driver was injured Thursday morning when his vehicle, left the roadway, somersaulted into a muddy field and landed on the man.
"Twin Falls County sheriff's officers said Sergio Castileford Estrada, 23, was traveling north on 900 East, a county road near Buhl, at about 8 a.m.
"The vehicle, traveling at an estimated 70 mph, went out of control on the gravel road and skidded about 300 feet in a northwest direction. It then began skidding sideways for another 60 feet when it tipped over onto its front, before dropping onto the top.
"Sometime during the rollover, the driver was thrown out and was pinned with his head and shoulders under the car. The officer said it was not known at what point he left the vehicle.
"Estrada was probably saved by the fact that he landed in soft mud; the accident report said. He was treated at the scene by the Castileford Quick Response Unit and taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, where he was being treated for internal injuries. He was transferred out of the intensive care unit Friday and listed in fair condition.

Birmingham back at work; officials report no decision

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — City officials in Twin Falls said there was nothing to report Friday afternoon, following a two-hour executive session called to discuss legal action against Police Commander Pat Birmingham.
The meeting was called at noon, reportedly to discuss the Birmingham case. Mayor Doug Vollmer said after the session that there was nothing accomplished and nothing to report.
Birmingham, who faces trial in U.S. Court in Boise on felony charges of falsifying an expense account for appearing as a witness in a federal court case, returned to work in the Police Department Friday. He has now completed the 30-day suspension without pay that was agreed to by the city in an arrangement with the U.S. Attorney's Office.

Birmingham and another city officer, Don Walden, were suspended for 30 days, but called back to work after completing the first two weeks of the suspension. The second two weeks have now been completed.
City Council members have been considering the possible obligation of paying the cost of Birmingham's legal fees, because he was asked by Public Safety Director Tim Qualls, with the approval of City Manager Tom Courtney, to return to work after the first two weeks of suspension. He and Walden were asked to come back to work and complete the remainder of the suspension at a later date because of injuries to three city officers during peak vacation time, which left the department short-handed, Qualls said.
It was after they returned to work that U.S. Attorney's Office asked a grand jury investigation into Birmingham's expenses, and the charge resulted.

Fire

Johnson secured the building for the investigation Friday. He and others will try to find out what was in the house as of Thursday night to help determine if the fire was accidental or deliberate.
Whatever the cause, Friday morning's event was an ironic twist in the fate of the beleaguered house, one of the last examples of Victorian architecture in Ketchum.
One year ago, this month, citizens groups rallied to save the house because he was unable to find a permanent location for it, the Valley Artists Guild led a citizens' effort to save and restore the house.
The "Friends of the Dallarhde House" and several others sought money to restore it, and many people responded with pledges.
Friday afternoon, those who worked in the effort said they were heartbroken over the strange turn of events.
"We're totally shocked," said Sue Jacobson of the friends of the Dallarhde group. "I can't imagine anybody of any conscience to have anything to do with this."

She agreed with McConville that the fire must have been deliberate.
"I'm just devastated, if that arson happened," said Lynn Stallard, the guild member who first suggested saving the house as a gallery for the group.
"Things were finally going in the right direction," she said. "It has been a difficult few years for the house built in 1883 for Alexander Hamilton Dallarhde, the man who constructed Warm Springs Road over Dallarhde Summit.
In 1982, the house on East Avenue lot, near the site on which it burned, was sold to make room for a shopping mall.
John Daley, the stepson of the man whose family bought it in 1915, attempted to save the house by moving it to a lot along the Big Wood River north of Ketchum. The house, he alleged, however, and the house set on another lot near Adams Gulch for more than a year while Daley appealed the county's decision.
Last summer, the Idaho Supreme Court returned the issue to the Blaine County Board of Commissioners for further review. Last fall, the Adams Gulch lot was sold.
Daley then moved the house to a friend's empty lot at Lake Creek, only to have that lot sell almost immediately.
Daley then moved the house to a friend's empty lot at Lake Creek, only to have that lot sell almost immediately.
Daley then moved the house to a friend's empty lot at Lake Creek, only to have that lot sell almost immediately.

The guild responded and proposed the city take over ownership of the house and place it on a city-owned lot. The guild would lease it, restore it and use it as a gallery while the city used it as a public meeting hall. The city agreed if the guild put together an acceptable plan for restoration and raising the money to do the work.
The city selected the East Avenue site and the house was moved there before winter set in. Some adjacent lots in the area. He said he wants to fill them with other historic buildings. He plans for the area to become a district for restored, historic buildings.
After the city granted the Dallarhde house a historic status last month to waive some building code requirements for the restoration, McConville began work on the house.

aggravated by declining land values that often bring forced-sale bids in well below the amount of the outstanding loans. Olson tried to ease that situation by posting even more sale notices than the law requires in foreclosures, just to increase the number of potential bidders.
"I sell, all too often, he said. "When you sell, it's never get near the value of it." That leaves the farmer, responsible for paying the rest of the debt when his livelihood has just been sold out from under him," Olson said.
It's an emotionally wrenching experience for the farmer and for a sheriff who has become part of the rural community.
"If you get one bad year, you lose everything you've worked for for 10 years," the silver-haired retired sheriff said. "I've gotten to know these people. They're friends of mine."

District court

TWIN FALLS — The following cases were filed recently in 5th District Court in Twin Falls:
James Olson vs. Janet Olson vs. Rodney Wallace Starr. The plaintiff seeks $10,990.80 for medical expenses resulting from a car accident with the defendant, payment for the loss of past and future wages, general damages of $150,000, $50,000 for lost ability to enjoy life, $100,000 paid to James Olson for the loss of comfort, society, assistance, and companionship of his wife, costs of suit and attorney's fees. The plaintiffs also demand that this matter be tried by jury.

Since then, the city has started a self-insurance program, and the City Council has encouraged city employees and taxpayers to report any unsafe conditions for which the city might be held liable.

Nixon papers center of dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House committee on Friday accused the Office of Management and Budget of subverting the regulatory process by giving the White House and Justice Department time to draft a policy that could block public release of the records of Richard Nixon's presidency.

The National Archives should disregard a Justice Department legal opinion that said the archivist has no power to overrule an executive privilege claim by Nixon, the House Government Operations Committee said in a report.

The Archives have custody of 42 million pages of documents and more than 800 tape recordings of the Nixon White House. Almost all the records of the Nixon presidency have been closed to the public for the past 12 years.

Rocket fired to test new joints

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — Morton Thiokol on Friday fired a section of a shuttle booster rocket to test two joints slightly different from the type blamed for the destruction of the space shuttle Challenger.

The 90-second test went off precisely on schedule, with the rocket section spouting bright orange flame and billows of dense black smoke. It was the second in a series of 10 planned through next July.

Alan McDonald, engineer in charge of the booster redesign team, said the first three tests were to simulate conditions that existed on the ill-fated Challenger flight Jan. 28. The following seven would be intended to "prove that all the problems have been solved" with the redesigned joint.

"We're very confident we will do that," he said.

NASA plans 1988 shuttle flight

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA announced Friday that it plans its first post-Challenger shuttle flight on Feb. 18, 1988, and issued a cargo manifest that does not accommodate a paying satellite launch customer for 2½ years more.

Of the 47 commercial contracts the National Aeronautics and Space Administration signed, only 19 will be honored by the space agency, following President Reagan's directives.

The first paying launch will be a military satellite, SkyNet-4, for Great Britain in July 1990. Others to be launched are a communications satellite for India in October 1990, another SkyNet for Britain's ministry of defense in 1991, and there will be shared NASA SpaceLab scientific flights with Japan and Germany in 1991.

Winery workers to return to jobs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Some 2,200 workers abandoned picket lines at California wineries Friday, preparing to return to work for the first time in six weeks after accepting a previously rejected contract.

Robert Fogg, president of the Winery, Distillery and Allied Workers Union Local 186, said he expected a return to work next Monday, possibly sooner.

But he warned that the workers were not completely happy. The union struck 11 of 12 plants represented by the Winery Employers Association on Aug. 18. The plants struck included E. & J. Gallo Co., the world's largest wine producer.

Longshoremen end 3-day strike

NEW YORK (AP) — A three-day walkout by dockworkers at ports from Maine to Virginia ended Friday when management agreed to extend an expired contract and continue talks, the union announced.

The agreement to keep the contract in force until Nov. 17 was seen as a victory for the International Longshoremen's Association, which had refused to accept a demand by the Council of North Atlantic Shipping Associations that any extension include implementation of a two-tier wage scale.

The council, which represents the ports of Baltimore, Hampton Roads, Va., Philadelphia and Providence, R.I., said wage concessions were essential if its ports were to remain competitive with southern ports, where the union had accepted pay cuts.

Libya stories not planted says panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Intelligence Committee has concluded that there was no policy decision by the Reagan administration to plant false stories about Libya with U.S. news media, its staff director said Friday.

In an interview, Bernie McMahon said, however, that there probably are government officials who leak deliberate misinformation, on merely erroneous data, on any number of topics, to meet their own objectives. He said he saw little way to halt that practice, and that even news organizations would object to the rules which might stop it.

A swift inquiry by the committee staff was begun after The Washington Post reported Thursday that an elaborate White House campaign this past August included "a disinformation program with the basic goal of making (Libyan leader Moammar) Gadhafi think that there is a high degree of internal opposition against him within Libya, that his key trusted aides are disloyal, that the U.S. is about to move against him militarily."

The plan was described in a three-page memorandum sent to President Reagan by John M. Poindexter, the national security adviser, and "the basic plan" was adopted at a White House meeting Aug. 14, the Post said.

"Everyone's assuming Poindexter's memo was what was approved," McMahon said. "Was there a policy decision to draft and place deliberately false stories in the American press or through agents of influence, either by the CIA or outside the CIA in the National Security Council or the State Department?"

The answer to that is no. There was no decision made to undertake such an activity.

Reagan denied anew Friday that the administration had attempted to mislead people about Gadhafi.

"No, we didn't tell any lies, and we weren't doing any of these disinformation things that we've been cited with doing," he said, replying to a shouted question as he walked toward his helicopter for a weekend at Camp David.

"We simply, as I said before, wanted him to understand that if he tried any more of the same type of terrorist acts, we would react," Reagan said.

The Senate committee looked into the matter because an executive order on intelligence issued by Reagan in 1981 authorizes the CIA to conduct secret special activities, including disinformation campaigns, so long as they "are not intended to influence United States political processes, public opinion, policies, or media."

"We're satisfied there was neither a violation of the spirit or letter nor any attempt to find or exploit a loophole, such as saying it was being done abroad but really intending it for here," McMahon said.

Claiborne asks for full Senate trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Imprisoned federal judge Harry E. Claiborne, described as a hard-working "sail of the earth individual," has asked for a full impeachment trial on the Senate floor, not the abbreviated procedure envisioned by the House.

In motions filed with the Senate by the Nevada judge's attorney, released Friday, the House was accused of attempting an "end-run" by asking the full Senate to reach a verdict without calling any new witnesses.

The House, which acts as a prosecutor in presenting the case for removal of Claiborne from office, has asked the Senate for a verdict on the basis of the judge's conviction for income tax evasion.

The Senate is expected to conduct a trial next week, although Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said there is some sentiment to postpone the proceedings until next year.

Israel marks Jewish new year

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Extra police officers were stationed at synagogues throughout the country Friday as Israelis began traditional prayers to mark the start of Rosh Hashana, the Jewish new year.

Israeli soldiers deployed along the border with Lebanon were on maximum alert to prevent any attempt to attack northern settlements during the holiday, military officials said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Concerns about terrorist raids increased after the Sept. 6 attack on a synagogue in Istanbul, Turkey, in which 21 worshippers were killed. Volunteers assisted police and soldiers in guarding public places, and Israelis were asked to be on the alert for suspicious articles.

The Jewish year 5747 was welcomed in with the blowing of the shofar, or ram's horn, the start of 10 days of inspection that ends with Yom Kippur, the Jewish Day of Atonement.

Irina Orlov receives passport

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet officials issued Irina Orlov a passport Friday and she obtained a visa for the United States, but the wife of dissident Yuri Orlov said she still did not know when she and her husband would be allowed to leave the country.

Mrs. Orlov, 40, told The Associated Press by telephone that she has not heard from her 62-year-old husband since Soviet officials told her they will be allowed to emigrate.

Orlov, a physicist, was sentenced to seven years in labor camps for his human rights activities in the 1970s. He has lived in exile in the Arctic city of Kibyal since his release in 1984. His exact whereabouts were not known as of late Friday.

"I still have heard nothing," his wife said when asked if he had contacted her.

Poland calls activity illegal

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The government on Friday declared a council formed earlier this week by former underground Solidarity activists illegal, and said they risk imprisonment for their activities.

The statement came as Lech Walesa, leader of the outlawed Solidarity free trade union, and at least four of the seven activists belonging to the newly formed Temporary Council of Solidarity were ordered to report to authorities for questioning.

Friday's actions were the first by communist authorities against the organization, which was formed Tuesday. Its seven members said they would abandon clandestine activities and begin working openly for independent trade unions.

Walesa supported creation of the new council but he is not a member.

Iraq hangs 7 for taking bribes

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Seven government employees and businessmen were executed by hanging for accepting bribes and commissions from companies that sought contracts in Iraq, according to a presidential decree published Friday.

Among them was Oil Ministry undersecretary Abdul Munim Hassan Alwan, it said. The businessman accused of bribing him, Nassir Shaker Nimro, also was reported hanged.

A contractor, two engineers, a company director and an industrialist were also executed. Alwan and the two engineers worked for the government.

A revolution tribunal found the seven guilty of corruption and President Saddam Hussein upheld the sentences, said the decree, dated Aug. 31.

Pope starts French trip today

LYON, France (AP) — Pope John Paul II, venturing into a country newly shaken by terrorism, begins his third trip to France on today to pay homage to the first Christian martyrs from Gaul.

Heavy Security has been planned for the visit.

President Francois Mitterrand and several Cabinet ministers will greet the spiritual leader of the world's 800 million Roman Catholics at Lyon's Satolas Airport before the pope sets off on a four-day tour of the Rhone-Alpes region of southeastern France.

Officials at the presidential palace said Mitterrand and John Paul would talk privately for about 40 minutes after airport ceremonies, exchanging views on peace in the world.

The pope will stay at the Hotel de Ville in Lyon on Saturday, in Paray-Le Monial, 100 miles northwest of Lyon, on Sunday; Ars, 20 miles north, on Monday, and at Annecy, 60 miles east, on Tuesday.

Guerrillas call veto 'historic example'

By The Associated Press

South African guerrillas said Friday the over-ride of President Reagan's sanctions veto was a historic example for the world, but governments that oppose harsh economic pressure appeared unlikely to follow it.

Two of them, Britain and West Germany, indicated their opposition to sanctions would continue. They are among South Africa's main trading partners.

Denmark welcomed the action by the U.S. Congress. The Danes placed a total ban on trade with South Africa earlier this year because of the government's apartheid policy of discrimination against the black majority.

The Netherlands said it would urge the 12-member European Common Market, which includes Britain and West Germany, to toughen its sanctions.

Domestic opponents of Margaret Thatcher contended that Reagan's loss of the veto this week would isolate the British prime minister, who is adamantly against sanctions, but a prominent member of her Conservative Party said there was no reason for a change.

West Germany's chief spokesman said the government of Chancellor Helmut Kohl still doubts the effectiveness of such measures and does not plan to impose new ones.

The African National Congress, the largest guerrilla group fighting the South African government, said Friday at its headquarters in Lusaka, Zambia, that the congressional override "will go into the history of our liberation struggle, which is in keeping with what every American believes in."

Support of sanctions by more than two-thirds of both houses of Congress "demonstrates how much and how long the Ronald Reagan administration has been out of step with the United States public," John Makatini told a news conference.

He is a Central Committee member of the ANC, which began guerrilla operations after the South African government banned it 25 years ago.

Makatini did not refer to a section of the legislation that calls for a halt to violence by the ANC and a U.S. investigation of communist influence within it.

It is "even more pressing for the ANC to escalate its multifaceted campaign against apartheid, including the armed struggle, and to make the country (South Africa) ungovernable," he said.

President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia said: "We are all delighted that the U.S. Congress has defied its own president over the issue of sanctions."

The bill that now becomes law forbids new investment and bank loans in South Africa and prohibits importation of steel, iron, coal, uranium, agricultural products, food, arms, ammunition and military vehicles from that country. It bars direct air traffic between South Africa and the United States and withdraws landing rights for the South African airline.

Nell Kinnock, leader of Britain's opposition Labor Party, said Mrs. Thatcher "is now totally stranded," but he doubted the congressional vote would sway her.

22nd chess game to resume today

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) — World Chess champion Garry Kasparov and challenger Anatoly Karpov adjourned the 22nd game of their title rematch Friday, with Kasparov a pawn ahead but Karpov making some tactical gains.

Kasparov, playing white, sealed his 41st move and play was scheduled to resume Saturday.

Chess experts were uncertain whether Kasparov could exploit his position for a win.

After 21 games, the score stands at 10.5 points each. A win would leave Kasparov needing only one more draw to stay champion, since he keeps his title if there is a 12-12 tie in the 24-game series.

Broncos find themselves in trouble

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

BOZEMAN, Mont. — There were three things Boise State University couldn't afford to do at the start of this football season if the Broncos expected to make the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs and have a shot at the Big Sky Conference championship: lose to Eastern Washington, lose to Idaho State and lose to Montana State.

Thus the Broncos, 1-2 for the season and 0-1 in conference, find themselves in Reno, Nev. at Idaho State Stadium this afternoon with the season on the line.

Boise State has never won in this ballpark.

And what began a month ago as a season of such promise for the Broncos is in danger of becoming a nightmare. A loss today will for all practical purposes eliminate BSU from the I-AA playoffs and the Broncos still have to play Idaho, Northern Arizona and Oregon State on the road and Nevada-Reno at home.

Freshman quarterback

"When you look at the league, you have to be realistic," said MSU Coach Dave Arnold, whose 1-3 ballclub is 1-1 in Big Sky games. "A team with two losses very seldom has had much of a chance in this conference. We've both got one loss, so I guess that makes it a must-win game."

The essential elements of the BSU horror story are these:

• The Broncos are down to one healthy tailback, junior Cliff Sexton. Last week's starter, redshirt freshman Tyler Burke, bruised his thigh against Idaho State and can't play today. Senior Greg Harrison, Burke's backup, hurt his knee last week for the second time in three weeks and can't play today. Chris Jackson, who started the season at the position, tore knee ligaments in the opening game and is gone for the year.

That leaves Sexton, whose varsity experience at tailback is limited to a 108-yard effort in a 74-0 romp over Humboldt State three weeks ago and 23 yards rushing against Idaho State last week, as the only healthy player who has ever lined up at the rear in Boise State's formation. Joe Little, a redshirt freshman from Boise who was the No. 3 fullback, will back up Sexton.

• Jim Ellis, BSU's all-Big Sky Conference senior inside linebacker, sprained his ankle in the ISU game. He'll play today, but it's questionable how mobile he will be.

• Peter Kwiatkowski, the Broncos' senior defensive tackle, also has a bad leg and is hobbling.

• Rodney Starr, Boise State's senior outside linebacker, has a leg injury and probably won't play today.

• Senior punter Ron Talbot didn't make the trip. There were broadcast reports Friday night that he had quit the team, but Broncos Coach Lyle Setencich couldn't be reached for comment Thursday or Friday and didn't return phone calls.

CLIFF SEXTON

miss his second straight game. He'll be replaced by sophomore Jeff Lindsey, who caught three passes for 41 yards against the Bengals a week ago.

• Senior quarterback Vince Alcaide, who re-injured the shoulder on his throwing arm last week against Idaho State, did make the trip. He'll back up redshirt freshman Keith Jarrett, who engineered the only scoring drive against the Bengals last week. Senior Hansen Choates, the two-year starter at quarterback before he was moved to the defensive secondary last spring, and former quarterback Bob Wheeler — another senior defensive back who used to play quarterback — both took reps in practice this week at the position and are presumably the third- and fourth-string quarterbacks at the moment. Choates is still scheduled to back up junior Ralph Gooding at one cornerback position.

"I really don't know what to expect," said Arnold Friday. "I heard earlier in the week that Jarrett and

Highland rolls over TF, 40-21

By LARRY HOVEY

POCATELLO — It was artillery practice night for the Highland Rams and quarterback Andy Bellia in the Midvale Friday night.

Bellia, a 6-foot-2, 180-pound senior, passed the Twin Falls Bruins into 40-21 submission, keeping the third-ranked Rams atop the Gem State Conference standings. The defeat for Twin Falls probably knocked Bellia out of any postseason playoff possibilities in Division I of Class A-1.

Bellia romped for 64 yards on an option keeper on Highland's second offensive play of the game, and from that moment on, the outcome was never in doubt. However, the Rams seemed more intense on throwing the long pass and working on other phases of their offense and that resulted in three scoring tosses to Jerry DeJournett. The first was a 47-yarder late in the first quarter and the second covered 39 yards early in the second. The third was a short, one-yard tip, with Bellia throwing all three passes.

Twin Falls rallied back on three Joel Jund to Nick Brunkow touchdown passes in the second half, but it only made the score a little more respectable. "I thought defensively we had the right scheme, putting pressure on Bellia, but our capital DBs (defensive backs) folded under the pressure," said a disappointed coach Bill Jones. "Offensively, we did not do much. Our

Shoshone blanks No. 5 Oakley, 13-0

By MICHAEL VANAUDELN

SHOSHONE — It wasn't very pretty, but the Shoshone Indians will take this kind of win anyway.

In a game marked by turnovers and blown opportunities and highlighted by some clutch defense, the Indians blanked the Oakley Hornets 13-0 in a Magic Valley Conference contest Friday.

"We played tough," said Indians head coach Larry Bond. "We didn't block well, we couldn't run, hit like we should've — we shley didn't do what we should've done; but it was a big win."

The win gives Shoshone a 4-0 conference record, tying the Indians with the undefeated Raft River Trejans and setting the stage for a conference showdown in two weeks. For the fifth-ranked and defending state

Class A-1 champion Hornets, the loss marks their second loss in as many weeks and drops them to a 2-2 conference record, virtually eliminating them from contention for the conference's one state playoff spot.

The opening quarter saw both teams run the same offense: three plays-and-punt. And both teams did it the same way by trying to move the ball strictly on the ground. It wasn't until Oakley quarterback Troy Woodhouse hit Linden Severe with 20-yard pass — moving the Hornets into Shoshone territory for the first time — that any of the teams realized there might be another way to move the ball.

Nonetheless, the Oakley drive was elymined by Joseph Schaeffer and the tough Indian defense.

Mirroring themselves still, both teams turned the ball over in their first second quarter drives but for

Jerome stuns fifth-rated Shelley Russets, 41-0

By The Times-News

SHELLEY — The Jerome Tigers and Shelley Russets came into Friday night's non-conference battle with identical 3-2 records. However, there was one difference between the two squads. Shelley was ranked in the No. 5 position in the A-2 football rankings, but that should change this week.

The Tigers scored 21 points in the first quarter, and rolled to a 41-0 upset win over the Russets Friday night.

Jay Ostler, a senior, scored three of the six Tiger touchdowns as he scored at will from 60, 62 and 69 yards and rushed for 230 yards for the night.

"We played well offensively and defensively," said Jerome Coach Joe Matile.

In fact, the first Jerome score came early in the contest as the Russets were stopped on three downs. But on the punt, the Tigers — were penalized for roughing the kicker.

On the first play of that second possession, Ostler picked off a pass and ran 60 yards for a touchdown and the rout was on.

Defense, which has not given up a touchdown for three games, was the key for the Tigers, who put pressure on the Shelley quarterback all evening.

Jerome also forced a lot of turnovers as the Tigers blocked three punts, intercepted a pair of passes and recovered three Shelley fumbles.

Game statistics:
Jerome 41, Shelley 0.
Jerome 1st quarter 21-0, 2nd 14-0, 3rd 6-0, 4th 0-0.
Shelley 1st quarter 0-0, 2nd 0-0, 3rd 0-0, 4th 0-0.
Jerome 1st quarter 21-0, 2nd 14-0, 3rd 6-0, 4th 0-0.
Shelley 1st quarter 0-0, 2nd 0-0, 3rd 0-0, 4th 0-0.

BURLEY — As expected, senior tailback Maury Toy got his yards Friday in a 20-0 Mountain Home-South-Central-Idaho Conference victory over Burley, but the Tigers did have a few surprises for the Bobcats.

With two — and sometimes three — defensive players keying on Toy, Tiger Coach Dick Kellum twice shifted 6-foot-2, 185-pound quarterback Gary Taylor to the tailback slot in Mountain Home's pro-set and the play paid off with a punt of touchdowns.

The victory nailed down the Tigers' fourth consecutive SCIC title with a 3-0 mark as Mountain Home, ranked fifth in the latest Associated Press poll, improved to 6-0 for the season. It also gave Mountain Home a leg up on the Class A-1 Division II playoffs. The Tigers must only defeat Caldwell the final game of the season to earn a trip to state.

Burley, now 2-3 after 17 in the SCIC, must beat the Cougars next week in Caldwell to maintain an outside shot at the playoffs in the three-school playoff plan.

The visitors put the first points on the board after Burley's second possession of the game, natted just four yards and Toy allowed the ensuing punt to roll dead at the Tiger 44.

Tailback Doug Van Zee, who rushed for 72 yards on the night, broke off tackle for 17 yards and a first down — the first for either team.

One play later senior wide receiver Dirk Kellum lugged a reverse to the Bobcat 19 for another first and 10.

Garin Granala, Burley's 6-1, 180-pound defensive stalwart, a thorn in the Tigers' side all night, set Mountain Home back to the 31 with the first of two first half sacks that

Will the real Bengals turn up tonight at the Kibbie Dome?

By STEVE CRUMP

MOSCOW — First-year University of Idaho football Coach Keith Gilbertson isn't quite sure who's going to show up at the Kibbie Dome tonight.

Will it be the Idaho State University football team that had 15 tackles for loss against Boise State last week, forced three turnovers the way we did last week against Idaho State, there's no reason we defense that had been giving up an average of 119 yards?

Or will it be the Bengals who gave up 50 points to Montana State two weeks ago, including 383 yards passing to quarterback Kelly Bradley?

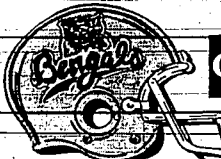

"I guess we have to assume it's last-week's team," says Gilbertson, whose 3-1 Vandals will open their Big Sky Conference season at 7:30 p.m. MDT against ISU.

Bengal Coach Jim Koetter agrees. "I don't see why we shouldn't be able to sustain it," says Koetter of the Bengals' fired-up performance in year in a 38-37 last-minute victory by the Bengals in Pocatello) will make it a more emotional game, but it sure got the players' attention. They know how quick Idaho State can beat them."

Gilbertson says he would prefer not to get into a scoring match with the Bengals, but that may be hard to avoid. Idaho-Idaho State games are rarely defensive gems, and defense is definitely the suspect part of both teams' games.

"They're a lot like we are," says Koetter. "They're young and not very deep on the defensive line and they have five good linebackers. They play a lot of eight-man fronts."

Colorado State stuns BYU, 24-20
PROVO, Utah (AP) — Steve Bartalo scored three touchdowns and set a career Western Athletic Conference rushing record as Colorado State stunned Brigham Young 24-20 Friday night.

The Cougars, who rushed for 131 yards on 23 carries, scored two touchdowns in the fourth quarter, the game winner on a 1-yard run with 46 seconds remaining.

The 200-pound senior gave the Rams a brief 17-13 lead with 9:53 remaining in the game on a 1-yard plunge. He broke the WAC career mark of 3,563 yards set by New Mexico's Mike Williams from 1976-79.

The victory gave CSU a 3-2 season mark and evened its conference record at 14. BYU, 3-2, fell to 1-1 in the WAC, a blow to the Cougars' hopes of winning their 11th straight conference title.

Bartalo's winning touchdown capped an 80-yard, 11-play drive which followed a pass-interference in the end zone by CSU's Jim King.

The interception spoiled BYU's opportunity to put the game away after the Cougars' Mike O'Brien kicked a punt 51 yards to the Rams' 16. BYU had taken a 20-17 lead with 7:14 remaining on a 9-yard run by Robert Parker.

But the game came back to 10-10 in the third period on a 3-yard run. Moments before, Bartalo had broken

THE ACES®

BOBBY WOLFF

"Patience is a bitter plant but it has sweet fruit."
— German proverb.

Patience holds the only answer to today's problem at four hearts. Play the trump ace too soon and the game will slip away.

When the game was first played in a Dallas team match, South ruffed the opening lead, cashed the A-K of diamonds and led a small diamond to East's jack. East shifted to a trump, and South impulsively played his ace. When he led the fourth diamond, West ruffed with his trump-queen, cashed his king and exited safely with a club. South could not reach dummy for the spade finesse, and the game fell one short.

When Dr. Ted Teel of Dallas played the game, the play was the same for the first four tricks. However, when East led his trump, Dr. Teel allowed it to ride toward dummy's 10. West took his queen, but now was stuck. Since a trump return would sacrifice his trump winner and a spade return would yield a free finesse, West led a club. Dr. Teel ruffed again and led his last diamond; and now West was stuck again. He couldn't keep the trump 10 from becoming the vital entry for the spade finesse, and instead of one down, Dr. Teel brought home an exciting 10 tricks.

If, instead of leading a club, West had sacrificed his trump trick by returning his trump king after winning his queen, he would have stopped the diamond ruff, but Dr. Teel would have made his game by
